

BSH-C611 Health Behavior Assessment

The purpose of this course is to review research and theory guiding the assessment of selected health behaviors; to integrate behavioral and physiological sciences in conducting health behavior assessments, and to emphasize assessment as a core component of the scientific approach to the development and implementation of public health interventions.